The Antarctic Peninsula's vegetation cover has increased by more than 1,000% in the last 40 years, expanding from less than one square kilometer to nearly 12 square kilometers. This rapid greening trend is a clear sign of how quickly climate change is reshaping even the planet's most remote and extreme environments.

The overarching objective is to engineer batteries that outperform current technologies, offering up to 100% greater energy density while extending battery lifespan. These new developments unfold against a backdrop of particular significance for the palladium and platinum markets.
