We are working to address two key issues which arise as the proportion of our energy from renewables increases. Firstly, there is the need to balance demand on the grid when the wind doesn't blow or the sun doesn't shine - we fill these gaps through flexible power provision.. Secondly, there is less short circuit level support and inertia as the traditional thermal ...

Energy storage is among the primary challenges associated with the development of renewable power. The fact that many renewable facilities can only produce power in particular conditions - solar panels when the sun is shining, wind turbines when the gusts are blowing - and that these conditions exist independently of
