2.1 Capacitor. The capacitor consists of two planar, parallel electrodes of area A , separated by a gap of thickness t that is filled with a dielectric with a relative dielectric constant ϵ_r . The capacitance value for such a capacitor is $C = \epsilon_r \epsilon_0 \frac{A}{t}$...

Capacitors are used in a wide range of applications, from power supply filtering to signal processing. They are essential components in many electronic circuits, providing energy storage and filtering capabilities. The choice of capacitor type and value depends on the specific requirements of the application, such as voltage, current, and frequency. In Malaysia, the capacitor market is growing, driven by the increasing demand for electronic products and the expansion of the manufacturing sector.

Ceramic capacitors, on the other hand, are only suitable for circuits requiring low capacitance. Electrolytic capacitors are chosen over ceramic capacitors for specific applications such as analogue signal processing and audio circuits due to their high capacitance and low cost.
